

An Investigation of the Policy of Ministers (Classic Reprint)

The following pages are addressed to the Independent Electors of England, as treating of those subjects by which they will be the most strongly influenced in the choice of their representatives at the ensuing general election. The greater part of the work was written before the close of the year 1817, but the publication of it was delayed by circumstances, in which the author only is interested. After the subsequent interval of near four months, it would have remained for ever a mere closet memento of past dangers ;but questions, almost forgotten, in the satisfied indifference of present security, having been revived and misrepresented, it is perhaps not unnecessary to present to the elective body of the people, a view, however imperfect, of the conduct pursued by those, who must shortly call upon them for a renewal of the highest trust, with which, as British Commoners, they can be invested by their fellow countrymen.
