

Stray Chapters in Literature, Folk-Lore, and Archaeology (Classic Reprint)

The following pages will be found to contain Essays and Papers upon topics connected, more or less closely, with history, literature bibliography, folk-lore, and statistics. These stray chapters have for the most part already appeared in periodicals or in the transactions of societies, and they are now brought together in the hope that their variety will be held to excuse the absence of that connecting thread which is rightly looked for in a formal treatise upon a definite subject. The author of a volume of miscellaneous papers has a special difficulty in framing a suitable designation for the offspring of his pen. Few would expect to find an essay on the work of a librarian where Mr. John Fiske has placed it in a volume entitled Darwinism, and other essays. This difficulty has pressed even upon great writers. There is a volume of De Quincey, which contains essays on Pope, Theory of Greek Tragedy, Literature, French and English Manners, Charles Lamb, Philosophy of Herodotus, Plato's Republic, Sortilege and Astrology, and Notes on Walter Savage Landor. To this delightful opportunity De Quincey gives the title of Leaders in Literature, with a notice of some errors affecting them. This might, with as much and as little propriety, have been given also to any of the other volumes of his writings. De Quincey felt the situation, and puts forth an ingenious plea in mitigation of censure. He says: The difficulty of framing titles for books such as shall adequately indicate their separate purposes and functions, whilst at the same time offering some colourable air of novelty, is sufficiently understood. But the full pressure of that difficulty as it sometimes exists, and as, in fact, it exists in the case immediately before us, is but imperfectly appreciated.
