

Excerpt from American Civics: For the Seventh and Eighth School Years The World War has effected great changes in governmental institutions and in international relations. New issues demand attention and some old ones have lost in relative importance. In offering American Community Civics for High Schools and Junior High Schools, it has been the aim of the author to preserve the main features of former editions of American Civics, while including such new material as the times demand and making the entire work up-to-date. Although a community civics, this volume deals primarily with civics and not chiefly with economics and sociology. There is sufficient attention given to community matters to fill all requirements and enough attention is paid to civics to meet the demands of state educational authorities. Each community has its own local political, economic, and sociological interests and a good teacher will not fail to give these proper attention.
