

American Commission for the Study of the Application of the Cooperative System to Agricultural Production, Distribution, and Finances in European Countries (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from American Commission for the Study of the Application of the Cooperative System to Agricultural Production, Distribution, and Finances in European Countries. The following pages were prepared by The Southern Commercial Congress in order to make known the public considerations which led to the decision to appoint an American commission to inquire into the organization of agricultural business in Europe. It has been thought well that I should explain briefly how the project which has received such remarkably influential support came to assume its present shape. The researches of the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome, Italy, had demonstrated the immense importance which Governments on the Continent of Europe attach to the employment by farmers of the best business methods which it would seem are by general consent cooperative. Hon. David Lubin, the American delegate to the institute, had in numerous publications impressed upon the American public the importance of an improved system of agricultural credit, which, probably owing to his advocacy, figured prominently in the presidential campaign, each of the three parties making it part of its constructive policy. This gave rise to a nonpolitical movement aiming at a thorough European inquiry as a preliminary to legislative or other action. The President summoned a conference of the governors of the States at the White House on December 7, 1912, for the consideration of this question. The interest aroused led to a widespread feeling that the scope of the inquiry should be broadened. The instructions, which are printed in the following pages, will explain the precise nature and purpose of the investigation which is to take place. It is hoped that as the result of the publication of this and the other documents the commission, which is to set out on the 26th of April, will carry to Europe two delegates from every State in the Union and thus be truly representative of the Nation at large. In conclusion a word may be said as to the nature of the support received from both sides of the Atlantic. The commission has been indorsed by the House of Governors, and also by the President, the President elect, and the ex-President, whose letters are printed as a part of this document. We further call attention to the letters and documents prepared by Hon. David Lubin and to the remarks of Sir Horace Plunkett, who speaks as the representative of that branch of the English-speaking peoples which has made its own investigations into continental agricultural systems and has learnt its own lesson therefrom. With such evidence before us we can not doubt the importance of these questions. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
