

Representing the Other: A Feminism & Psychology Reader

This innovative collection addresses a challenging issue in contemporary feminist theory and practice: whether - and how - we should represent members of groups to which we do not ourselves belong. The discussions identify key concerns related to representation and difference. Contributors draw on personal experiences of speaking `for and `about Others in their research, professional practice, writing or political activism. Problems of representing Others with ethnic or cultural backgrounds different from ones own are highlighted, and the discussions extend to representations of children, prostitutes, infertile women, `fat women, gay men with HIV//AIDS and people with disabilities.
