Not illustrated. 1844 Excerpt: ... In that large number of clergy whom the parliament and its agents deprived, and dismissed to penury, scarcely two or three are known to have recorded their sufferings. Of these, one was this popular and admired prelate. Four years after his death, appeared a volume, edited by his sons, with the title of The shaking of the Olive Tree, &c. containing, with other remains of the bishop, two tracts, since well known, relating to the events of his life, viz. Observations of some Specialties of Providence, &c., and Hard Measure. On these pieces the various biographical notices of Bishop Hall, since given to the public, have been all founded. The following pages, chiefly derived from the same source, pretend to little more than to mark the order of his literary labours, and their connexion with the public events, and prevailing opinions of the time. Joseph Hall was born July 1, 1574, at Ashby de la Zouch, in Leicestershire, in which town his father held the office of bailiff or governor, under Henry earl of Huntingdon, president of the north. To the instructions of a religious mother he, in common with some other holy men, owed the constant piety of his disposition. His education, to the 15th year of his age, was conducted, with success answerable to his lively genius, at the grammar-school of his native town. He was then, at his own earnest intreaty, sent to Cambridge, and entered of Emmanuel College, then recently founded. Here he was soon admitted to a scholarship; and, about the 22nd year of his age, was chosen fellow. He acquired great reputation by the ability shewn in his public exercises. He likewise ably filled, during two years, the office of professor of rhetoric; when he resigned it for more congenial studies, and soon afterwards took orders. It was at ...
