

What was your rank? oral historian Aaron Elson asked Nick Paciullo, a Marine Corps veteran who fought on Iwo Jima, Saipan, Kwajalein and Roi-Namur. I was a private ... a Pfc ... a corporal ... a private ... a Pfc ... a corporal, says Paciullo, who notes that he always seemed to be in trouble. I was with two gentlemen -- two Marines, I should say, he says, named Pudlow and McDowell. A short time later, still thinking about his buddies, he says, Pudlow was killed on Iwo, McDowell lost a leg on Saipan and I almost lost an eye right after that. A fourth member of the group that always seemed to be getting in trouble, Richard Anderson, was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously after throwing himself on a grenade on Kwajalein.

These four interviews by Aaron Elson, one of Americas premier oral historians of the Greatest Generation, offer a roller coaster ride through the highs and lows of World War II in the Pacific.
