

Soviet Naval Operations Against a Naval Missile Attack

Soviet Naval Operations Against a Naval Missile Attack Analysis of the capabilities of our Navy shows that during a threatening period it is capable of the timely deployment of its forces, to combat nuclear/missile submarines, carrier strike ships, and surface missile carrying ships in the most probable areas of their operations in the Barents and Norwegian Seas, the North Atlantic, the Sea of Japan, and the northwest part of the Pacific Ocean. Naval operations in the Mediterranean Sea will be difficult, and almost impossible in the Arabian Sea.....
